Christy Kulasingam

Freelance business consulting professional

Christy Kulasingam is a veteran business consultant and advisor with a 'Big 4' pedigree and over 15 years of global management consulting experience. Christy advises 'C-level' executives on operational transformation and strategy execution, and shapes and leads the delivery of these engagements. He focuses particularly on the technology, media and telecommunications (TMT) sectors.

Christy thrives at the intersection of business and technology, exploiting his educational and professional experience, expertise and interests. His career started as a solution architect in the software industry in the United States. He then joined a software unit of Arthur Andersen and eventually transferred to its nascent Business Consulting division. To exploit his 'dot com' consulting experience from the US West Coast, Christy moved to the UK on an 18-month secondment in 1999. He has called the UK 'home' ever since. After joining Deloitte UK as part of the Arthur Andersen transaction in 2002, Christy became a director in Deloitte's consulting business, where he specialised in shaping, selling and delivering technology-enabled business transformation engagements. He left Deloitte in 2009 to found and undertake freelance advisory and management consulting assignments with London-based Radbourne Consulting Limited.

Christy has worked with blue chip companies including BSKyB, BT, Cable & Wireless, Cisco, Digiturk, ONO (Spain) and Siemens as well as top tier law firms and private equity companies. He has also advised start-ups and entrepreneurs on a number of innovative ventures.

Regarded as an expert on IT and TMT industry developments, Christy has been quoted in the media on topics such as cloud computing, social media, green computing, mobile technology and RFID. He has spoken at and chaired breakouts at industry conferences, including ones by IDC and Intellect. (For a sampling of media mentions, use this string in a search engine: "christy kulasingam" OR "chris kulasingam").

Christy belongs to 'associate networks' of a number of consultancies, both large and boutique. He often collaborates with these firms or other freelancers to structure and deliver his client assignments.

When not melding his interests of business and technology, Christy is likely to be spotted partaking in his passions - on the cricket field (he plays for two London-based clubs) or on his snowboard in the Alps or the Rockies.
