

Coronavirus regulatory monitoring service

The speed and scale of the Coronavirus pandemic means that governments are having to act quickly. National policies can change daily, and emergency powers are being used to pass legislation.

Some of these changes will have an immediate impact on your business.

DLA Piper is using its sector knowledge, global presence, and political insight to provide clients with bespoke monitoring services to help them navigate and mitigate the impact of Coronavirus on their operations. Policy is rarely made in a vacuum. Close monitoring will indicate the direction of travel, and the likely timings of decisions that each government, regulator, or international organisation will make in response to this pandemic. Indeed, in some developing markets, governments are regulators and also in business, underscoring the importance of monitoring the posture and response of these establishments to COVID-19. With that foresight comes a key commercial advantage – time. Time to prepare and to strategize in an environment where others will only be able to react.

Whether you are looking for regular monitoring of all legal, regulatory and governmental developments in a large number of countries, or a sector-specific focus in a few, DLA Piper's service can be tailored to your needs. The service also includes a hotline for emergency queries.

Examples of our work include:

A daily monitoring service covering multiple jurisdictions across Europe, the Americas, MENA and Asia-Pacific, providing updates relating to HR and employment law, security services, data privacy rules, the economy, education and healthcare.

Regular monitoring of all policy and legislative changes in eight countries in which our client has a presence, including more in-depth analysis of the output of sector-specific regulators and trade associations in each country, prepared three times a week in a format to feed directly into the client's internal reporting structures.

A daily monitoring service across 12 jurisdictions, focusing on the movement of people and the food ingredient industry.

A regulatory update and monitoring service focused on the implementation of trade prohibitions and restrictions affecting key medical devices across 17 key jurisdictions of business critical importance to the client's global supply chain.
